Perhaps the greatest stumbling block to happiness is being unable to perceive spiritual realities or utilize our spiritual gifts. Every great religion and wisdom tradition speaks of the spiritual world and higher realms of consciousness, in which you acquire special powers, but they fail to tell us how to live in these states of serenity and bliss. There is a way to perceive the world. There is a way to achieve an understanding of the world that is simultaneously spiritual and yet suited for daily living.

Sophy Burnham is an award-winning playwright, novelist, and nonfiction writer. Three of her books have appeared on the New York Times bestseller list. Her works have been translated into twenty-two languages. Her articles and essays have been published in Esquire, New York, The New York Times Magazine, Town & Country, and Reader's Digest. An international speaker, she has appeared frequently on television and radio programs around the country, including Oprah, Larry King Live, Good Morning America, Today, and CBS Morning News.
